Major Federal Legislation Concerned With Child Protection, Child Welfare, and Adoption

The primary responsibility for child welfare services rests with the States, and each State has its own legal and administrative structures and programs that address the needs of children and families. However, States must comply with specific Federal requirements and guidelines in order to be eligible for Federal funding under certain programs.

Beginning with the passage of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) in 1974, the U.S. Congress has implemented a number of laws that have had a significant impact on State... child protection and child welfare services.¹ Such legislation frequently requires Federal departments and agencies, such as the Children’s Bureau within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, to issue or amend Federal policy and regulation.² New legislation also prompts responses at the State level, including enactment of State legislation, development or revision of State agency policy and regulations, and implementation of new programs.

The largest federally funded programs that support State and Tribal efforts for child welfare, foster care, and adoption activities are authorized under titles IV-B and IV-E of the Social Security Act (the Act). These programs are administered by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and include the title IV-B Child Welfare Services and Promoting Safe and Stable Families (formerly known as Family Preservation) programs, the title IV-E Foster Care Program, the title IV-E Adoption Assistance Program, and the title IV-E Chafee Foster Care Independence Program. The Social Services Block Grant (SSBG) is authorized under title XX of the Act and funds a wide range of programs that support various social policy goals.

To provide a framework for understanding the Federal legislation that has shaped the delivery of child welfare services, this publication presents a summary of Federal legislation since 1974 that has had a significant impact on the field. It provides an overview of each act and its major provisions. The full text of the acts included in this publication can be found on Information Gateway’s Index of Federal Child Welfare Laws.

• Required a State Safe and Stable Families Program plan to describe how the State identifies which populations are at the greatest risk of maltreatment and how services are targeted to them.

• Revised requirements for time-limited family reunification services provided to a child removed from the child’s home and placed in out-of-home care, and to the child’s parents or primary caregiver, in order to facilitate the child’s safe, appropriate, and timely reunification with the parents or caregiver.
